

The heart is one of our most important organs. It is made of very strong muscle and pumps blood around your body. It pumps blood by squeezing and relaxing in a regular rhythm. It is pear shaped and is slightly larger than a fist.

The heart is divided into four sections called chambers. These chambers consist of two atriums and two ventricles. Some animals have only three chambers, and most of these animals are amphibious.